SCOPE OF WORKS

Hall Upgrade

The proposed works provide a staged hall AV upgrade separated into video, audio and control components. The system is designed as an integrated solution, with each stage able to be priced separately for budgeting purposes. Full functionality will require all nominated stages to be completed, as each stage relies on shared infrastructure, signal routing and control integration.

The video works include the supply and installation of a new high brightness laser projector. The projector will be installed on a new ceiling mounted pole and bracket assembly, positioned to suit the existing projection screen and final throw distance requirements. The existing projector, pole and ceiling bracket will be decommissioned.

The existing motorised projection screen will be retained and reused. New data cabling will be installed to the projection screen location, with a relay to control interface provided to enable integration with the new control system. Existing power at the projection screen location is assumed to be available and suitable for reuse.

The video system will provide a single projected image within the hall. Source selection will include a stage HDMI input and a rack mounted HDMI input. The stage input will be provided using an HDMI transmitter wall plate, with signal extension back to the rack mounted video switching equipment. The rack HDMI input will be mounted within the custom rack panel. A laptop docking station is not included, as laptops can be connected through the nominated HDMI input locations.

The video switching system will provide HDMI source switching, video signal extension and audio extraction for the nominated HDMI sources. Presentation audio from HDMI sources will be extracted through the video switching system and routed into the digital audio processor for distribution through the hall audio system. The existing DVD and CD player equipment will be removed from the active AV system. Decommissioned equipment will be left on site by default unless the client requests removal from site.

The audio works include the supply and installation of a new digital audio processor to manage microphone, presentation, Bluetooth and zone audio routing. The system will support speech, music playback and performance use within the hall, with processing and routing configured to suit the retained speaker and amplifier infrastructure.

The existing hall speakers and existing amplifiers will be retained and reused. Existing speaker cabling and analogue audio cabling will be reused where suitable. The existing amplifier outputs will be reconnected to the new digital audio processor to allow the retained speaker system to operate as part of the upgraded AV system.

The wireless microphone system will include one rechargeable wireless lectern microphone and two rechargeable wireless handheld microphones. All three microphones will be capable of operating at the same time. The wireless microphone receiver will be installed within the existing AV rack, with remote antennas mounted in opposite corners of the hall to assist with wireless coverage.

A Bluetooth audio input will be provided for wireless audio playback from compatible devices. The Bluetooth input will be mounted within the custom rack panel so that it remains accessible to staff while reducing casual student access.

The control works include the supply and installation of a simple touch panel control interface with integrated control processing capability. The touch panel will provide source selection for the stage HDMI input and rack HDMI input. The touch panel will also provide projector power controls, screen raise and lower controls, master output volume control and individual microphone gain controls.

The touch panel will control agreed audio functions within the digital audio processor, including master level and microphone level adjustments. Final control functions, screen layouts, password requirements and user workflows will be confirmed through two client workshop sessions. These workshops are allowed as in person meetings, with online meetings available if preferred.

Access to the touch panel, rack HDMI input and Bluetooth input will require the rack door to be opened. If this location is not considered suitable by the client, an alternate control location can be reviewed.

The system will include an AV Control Management Interface to allow the nominated system components to communicate with the touch panel and integrated control processing system. This interface will support control and management connectivity for the projector, projection screen control interface, audio processor and video switching equipment.

The existing AV rack will be reused. New AV equipment will be installed into the available rack space, including the audio processor, wireless microphone receiver, video switching equipment, AV Control Management Interface and associated accessories. A custom two rack unit panel will be provided to house the touch panel, rack HDMI input and Bluetooth input. Cable management, labelling and rack dressing will be provided as required to support the upgraded system.

The works include associated cabling, fixings, installation hardware, testing and commissioning required for the nominated stages. Existing power outlets at the projector, projection screen and rack locations are assumed to be available and suitable for reuse. Electrical works are excluded.

An indoor elevated work platform suitable for the required projector and elevated AV infrastructure works will be allowed. Floor protection will be provided for elevated work platform use. Final elevated work platform suitability is subject to site access, floor loading, doorway access and work area confirmation.

Unused cabling will be removed where practical and accessible.
Make good works, patching and painting are excluded.

Handover

At project completion, a comprehensive handover package will be provided, including as built documentation, operations and maintenance manuals, and an asset register.

A 1 hour end user training session will also be conducted to ensure appropriate system operation and familiarity.

We will provide a 12 month defect liability period covering all workmanship associated with the installation and integration of the system. During this period, any defects arising from installation works will be rectified at no cost to the client.

All installation works will be carried out with attention to maintaining a clean and organized workspace. Rubbish will be removed from site upon completion, and the work area will be kept neat and tidy throughout the installation process.
